

The Pluto Observer

Watchdog to the Solar System

Earth Edition

June 2006

Celsius 9/11

Zacarias Moussaoui, the al-Qaida conspirator whose role in the September 11, 2001 attacks on the United States led to the deaths of more than 3,000 people, was somehow spared the death penalty for his crimes in a federal courthouse in Alexandria, Va.

The shocking verdict handed down on May 3rd sends the wrong message to every terrorist group currently operating on planet Earth. We on Pluto interpret that message as saying that, if you dare to bomb important U.S. locations such as the World Trade Center or The Pentagon or even the home of The President, the U.S. Government will clothe and feed you for the rest of your life.

From our orbiting telescope out near the Van Allen Belt, Observer watchdogs were almost certain that both of Moussaoui's middle fingers were extended as he left the courthouse in irons, a gesture matching his callous remark that he had won while America had lost. Too bad he was right.

Plutonian Tip-of-the-Day:
"If you can't stand the heat, keep your cool."

June

Backhand-of-the-Month Award

Once again, deciding what Earthling group should receive the Plutonian Backhand-of-the-Month Award was a "no brainer" challenge. The Pluto Observer awards this month's disgraceful honor to all members of the jury who found Zacarias Moussaoui guilty of conspiracy in the 9/11 terrorist attacks but who then failed to sentence the unremorseful and boastful evildoer to death for his role in the unconscionable crimes of that infamous day.

Moussaoui will now receive three squares a day, a warm bed and better health care than most Americans. With incentives such as these, terrorists around the globe will soon be standing in line to enter the home of the free and the brave and, ironically, the land of equal opportunity.

Not that long ago, it was Arab Egypt clashing with the Israelis that put the Gaza Strip on the worldwide map, then the hostility between the Palestinians and the Israelis and now we have Hamas vs. Fatah. What's next for the Cradle? Kibbutz vs. Caravan?

Two Thumbs Up for Bill Clinton

Americans didn't want national health care when the Clintons ran the White House but former President Bill Clinton has finally tasted some victory on that battlefield, this time in the war against childhood obesity and that's a big step forward for that country. Brokering a deal with the country's largest beverage distributors that will remove sugary soft drinks from the nations elementary and middle schools over the next three years, Clinton has done more for Americans out of office than President Bush has done during his five and a half years in office. Maybe Senator Hillary Rodham Clinton will pick up the national health care ball and score a Presidential touchdown with it in 2008.

In the next issue of The Pluto Observer

☞ How Nazi gold financed England's crop circle hoax
☞ "Reptilians soaped MIR's windows at Halloween...": former Cosmonauts tell all
☞ NASA's Space Shuttle and the illegal alien slave trade