

The Pluto Observer

Watchdog to the Solar System

Earth Edition

March 2007

Backhand-of-the-Month Award for March 2007

The Pluto Observer bestows this month's BOTM Award on the United Nations for being such a limp-wristed body of potential power, especially in this age of international terrorism. And that includes cyber terrorism, most of which is aimed at the United States.

It's high time the U.N. became or formed an international lawmaking body that enforced world-wide laws against terrorist activity. Using Interpol to investigate such crimes and to capture the faceless thieves who have been preying on the world's unsuspecting Internet users, these cyber terrorists could then be turned over to The World Court at The Hague which the U.N. could empower with the right to condemn and sentence the guilty parties.

And let the sentence for international terrorism – no matter what the crime or where it originates on planet Earth or who it targets – be death. On Pluto, where fraud is always punishable by death, our enforcement of global laws has been our crowning victory as a civilized planet.

Hat's Off to the U.S. “Democrat Party”

We at the Observer would like to take a moment to congratulate the new Democratic-led U.S. Congress for making your president accountable for war-mongering. By tying his hands with future Congressional approval, this stupid and near-sighted elected clown will not be able to squander American lives and tax money in Iran as easily as he did in Iraq and Afghanistan. And a special tip of the hat to House Speaker Nancy Pelosi for taking this bold initiative against all odds.

Plutonian Tip-of-the-Day

“A Fool's Paradise cannot be exposed for what it is by any of its residents.”

We Smell A Rat

Plutonians smell a big rat stinking up the U.S. 2008 Election campaign trail. It's the spirit of the American people who love nothing better than digging for dirt.

British Troop Pullout a Big “Red Flag” for U.S.

Great Britain's plan to begin withdrawal of troops from Iraq, announced recently by Prime Minister Tony Blair, ought to be a big “red flag” for U.S. President George Bush. With troop pullouts also planned by Denmark, South Korea and Lithuania, the war in Iraq will soon become a unilateral military operation of the U.S. and more easily recognized by the rest of the world as a vengeful pipe dream of America the Beautiful's over-empowered and foolish leader.

In the Next Issue of The Pluto Observer

☞ The Mayan calendar and the year 2012: Pluto's own prediction about Earth in the Latter Days

☞ UFOs over Washington D.C. and what they mean for the 2008 Elections

☞ 10 things to do on Pluto if you ever get there via NASA's Buck Rogers Flight Plan